Abstract

Old documents concerning religious life in Craiova show that since the eighteenth century in this great city several churches were built from bricks by landowners, merchants or simple believers. Repaired or restored several times over the years, these holy places have served as a parish church since the nineteenth century. In the first four decades of the twentieth century, these worthy priests served parishes, assisted by church singers, sacristan and trustees industrious, with love for their flock, role models nowadays. All these priests held a beautiful pastoral missionary activity, cultural and social.
