Abstract

In this year 2018, the modern state of Romania celebrates its first centenary since the Great Union Act on 1 December 1918. It is a blessed occasion to express our admiration and gratitude to those who have contributed to the realization of this national ideal. In our presentation, we mention the most important clerics of the Romanian Orthodox Church who contributed in a good way to the act of union of the Romanian territories. They can be models for today, a living parable of sacrifice, in the service of the interest of our country. Those evoked are only a fraction of those who, through their actions and often through their lives have been, at the foundation of the Great Union Act.
