Abstract

Our article speaks about the rationality of the theological discourse. In the Christian perspective, we understand truth not as something ideological but as something which can be known. Contrary, the ideology of modern theories refuses to accept the traditional way of presenting the truth. To demonstrate the rationality of the theological dialogue we present the origin and the nature of it, understood by the Holy Fathers. They accentuated the importance of the divine revelation in the understanding of the existential truth. Much more, we present which are the most important characteristics of theological discourse. In conclusion, the Incarnated Son of God brought us what we should know for our salvation and for the entire world.
